Are educators at your school scrambling to understand what the expectations embedded within the Common Core State Standards (CCSS) mean for students to score well on the upcoming assessments? Although the assessments haven't been released yet, now is the time to examine curriculum to prepare for assessments. If you are looking for a workshop that not only examines the standards but also provides instructional materials to teach lessons on each standard, this is the workshop for you.

No need to change curriculum because of CCSS! In this workshop, the presenter will discuss 95 Percent Group's innovative new product, Linking CCSS to Your Curriculum: Lessons for Mastering Standards, which offers a customizable, flexible "how to" for integrating lessons on the CCSS skills into any school's existing curriculum.

Not just aligned with the standards, it teaches the skills of the standards! Entirely new, and written after the final release of the CCSS, Linking CCSS to Your Curriculum is a vital tool for seamlessly integrating the Common Core State Standards in reading into any curriculum. The lessons provide all materials necessary (including short texts) to teach the standard skills in any order to fit relevant topics of your curriculum throughout the year.

Our workshop will address the 10 anchor English Language Arts (ELA) standards for reading informational and literary text in grades 6-8, and then the day will be divided into sections about each anchor standard and teachers will have time to learn the meaning of the standard before reviewing a lesson on how to teach it, utilizing graphic organizers and text specifically written to teach the skill.

Participants will leave the workshop with one complete lesson needed to explicitly model the underlying skill first using short text that is provided before applying it to their existing curriculum. The lesson can be immediately applied and practiced on the same day with content from their English, Science, or Social Studies class.

Each participant
will receive a FREE copy
